Dear alumni and friends,

Active engagement with the University needn't end upon graduation. Each year we present a wealth of public lectures, cultural and sporting events, music concerts, art exhibitions and thought provoking seminars. Most of the events are free and open to all our alumni and friends.

You can of course continue your studies with:

Living on the edge: Distinguished Alumni present

Dancer and choreographer Michael Parmenter, who will present at the Distinguished Alumni Speaker Day

Free lectures from six exceptional alumni will enlighten and challenge us at the 2010 Distinguished Alumni Speaker Day on Saturday 6 March.

Our Distinguished Alumni Award recipients represent the breadth of disciplines at our University, with the Speaker Day line up including a variety of topics from life on the edge - on the edge of creative and scientific discovery; on the sharp edge of controversy, and on the emergent landmass we call New Zealand, driven by motion between two plates. All our recipients have used their talent and expertise to make significant contributions that impact in positive ways on other people's lives.

The Festival takes place 26-28 February at Albert Park in Auckland. Sample delicious Chinese snacks from the food stalls, browse the authentic craft stalls, and picnic on the grass in the glow of the lanterns specially commissioned from China.

Once again, The University of Auckland has a strong presence at the Festival, with bands and activities in the Quad, red lighting of the ClockTower, banners on Princes Street, open-air movies (see below) and students in Chinese costume.

Business School presents open-air movie nights

As part of the Lantern Festival, The University of Auckland Business School will screen three free movies on February 26, 27 and 28 from 8.30pm in the John Hood Plaza outside the Owen G Glenn Building.

The movies selected are 1987's Red Sorghum (Hong gaoliang) which tells the story of an idyllic village in the backblocks of North China overtaken by the modern world (starring Gong Li); Chinese classic The Big Road (Dalu), a mostly silent film which was made in 1934 by Sun Yu depicting the tale of a rural road-making gang of young men determined to defend the nation against an unnamed enemy; and Five Golden Flowers (Wuduo jinhua), a 1959 Maoist love story directed by Wang Jiayi telling the story of a young lovelorn man searching for his one true love, his 'Golden Flower'.

As the movies will be shown outside against the side of the building, those keen to participate are advised to bring something to sit on - cushions and beanbags are very welcome!

National Young Leaders' Days

The University of Auckland is proud to sponsor the 2010 National Young Leaders' Days - New Zealand's largest student leadership event - run by the Halogen Foundation.

School principals nominate top students to attend the event where they can view presentations and interact with high profile personalities selected by the foundation. This year speakers include Bruce Pilbrow - CEO of Parents Inc., Pat Buckley - life skills educator and motivational speaker and Pippa Witzell, host of TVNZ's Breakfast programme.

Celebrating its 10th anniversary, the 2010 National Young Leaders' Days is an event not to be missed. It will be held in Auckland on 11 March and Palmerston North on 15 March.

Visiting Hood Fellow to lecture on organisational change

Professor John Van Maanen from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology will give a free public lecture at the Business School at the beginning of March. Visiting the University as a Hood Fellow, Professor Van Maanen will speak on The Organization Behind the Chart: Culture and Networks at Work.

The talk will introduce three perspectives useful for understanding the nature of organisation and organisational change - the strategic design, political and cultural perspectives. Several network studies will be presented to illustrate and make concrete the analytic approach.

The lecture takes place on 4 March, 6.30-7.50pm in lecture theatre OGGB4.
