"As a Communication, Culture, and Media major, my research entails hands-on learning about different cultures and the way people interact in society. Doing research abroad is one of the best ways to gain this experience, as it combines living in a different culture with doing historical research about it. It is incredible to see the influence of Māori culture around campus. The University and the surrounding city with all its cultural diversity is what makes it such a beautiful place to live, and adds to the experience I was looking for when I came to New Zealand."

Bridget Alaniva is a Study Abroad student from Michigan Technological University, USA. She received an ISA University of Auckland Summer Research Programme scholarship in 2018.
