Auckland Law School
Postgraduate Prospectus 2018
Auckland Law School offers the largest range of postgraduate Law programmes in New Zealand and is ranked among the best law schools in the world*.

A postgraduate law degree from New Zealand’s world-ranked university is an important step in your career, whether in the field of Corporate and Commercial Law, Environmental Law, Human Rights Law, International Law, Litigation and Dispute Resolution or Public Law.

Our postgraduate programmes are taught by our own academic staff, members of the Department of Commercial Law in the Business School, leading members of the profession and distinguished academic visitors from abroad. Our team also provides PhD supervision in a wide range of areas, with scholarship funding available.

The Master of Laws is for those pursuing a legal career in New Zealand or internationally. The Master of Legal Studies allows other professionals in areas such as planning, education, engineering and commerce to take law courses of relevance to their profession.

We also offer the Master of Taxation for law or commerce graduates who intend to make tax consulting or tax advocacy their career.

The Davis Law Library is an outstanding international research facility. Its collection of online and print resources is unequalled within New Zealand. You can access its many databases wherever and whenever you want to research. The depth and breadth of the collection provide an excellent foundation for your study. If you are considering a PhD, we have an exciting new Faculty of Law Doctoral Fellowship available. You’ll find more information on pg 15.

For our LLM candidates there are two LLM Awards on offer annually.

We encourage you to join us in the postgraduate programme. You will find it challenging and rewarding. For those proposing to come from overseas, Auckland is a great place to live, study and make life-long friends. The rest of New Zealand is an added attraction for you to explore during breaks in your programme.

We look forward to welcoming you to postgraduate study at Auckland.

Postgraduate study in Law

The Auckland Law School offers a wide range of courses taught by our own experts, as well as eminent scholars from the world’s premier law schools. We offer six specialisations: Corporate and Commercial Law; Environmental Law; Human Rights Law; International Law; Litigation and Dispute Resolution; and Public Law. These specialisations enable you to focus on a particular area of study, while allowing you the opportunity to pursue other areas of interest.

Postgraduate programmes offered by the Law School include the Doctor of Philosophy (PhD), Master of Laws (LLM), Master of Legal Studies (MLS), Master of Taxation Studies (MTaxS) and a Postgraduate Certificate in Law (PGCertLaw).

The research portfolio option enables LLM and MLS students to research in chosen subject areas. Study programmes are designed with great flexibility to cater to a diverse range of people, from legal practitioners to full-time students. The Law School offers a number of courses (intensive, part-semester and whole-semester) that are globally relevant to both domestic and international students.

If you want to study for an internationally recognised degree in a stimulating academic environment with a strong international focus, explore our study options and get your career off to the best possible start.

The benefits of advanced legal study

Postgraduate study in law is increasingly important in a globalised world, as careers now demand more focused, sophisticated and advanced legal expertise. The Law School’s postgraduate programmes allow you to specialise in areas that are important to employers, but also suit your academic interests. The programmes attract a diverse mix of new graduates, experienced practitioners, partners and industry professionals, as well as international students from various jurisdictions, all of whom bring their differing perspectives and talents to the postgraduate seminars.

Investing in postgraduate study at the University of Auckland will broaden your academic, research and employment horizons, while adding value with specialist skills and knowledge.

The Auckland Law School leads the development of quality postgraduate legal education in New Zealand. Our postgraduate degrees are internationally recognised, with graduates who are valued and sought after throughout New Zealand and the world.

Why study with us?

The University of Auckland is New Zealand’s highest-ranked university.

New Zealand’s leading university

The University of Auckland is New Zealand’s highest-ranked university. The Auckland Law School is ranked 36th in the QS World University Rankings 2017 and is also ranked among the world’s top 200 universities by the Times Higher Education World Rankings of Universities, and is the highest ranked New Zealand university in the Shanghai Jiao Tong Academic Ranking of World Universities.

The University of Auckland has a strong international focus. It is the only New Zealand member of Universitas 21 and is a member of the Worldwide Universities Network and the Association of Pacific Rim Universities. The University of Auckland is home to more than 42,000 students. More than 6,000 international students from over 110 countries choose to study here.

Flexible learning

Our postgraduate programmes are structured to allow you maximum flexibility. We understand that personal, family and work commitments are important factors when deciding whether to study, so we offer options that fit with your lifestyle. There are four to choose from: full-semester courses taught in the early evening; half-semester courses; intensively-taught courses over three to five days; and independent research programmes. We encourage you to come and meet with one of our advisers. They are available and happy to discuss your best fit.

Specialisation

Specialisation is optional, but you can elect to have your LLM or MLS degree awarded in Corporate and Commercial Law; Environmental Law; Human Rights Law; International Law; Litigation and Dispute Resolution; or Public Law. To specialise you must complete a minimum of three-quarters of your degree points in one of these areas.

Research centres

The Auckland Law School is home to a number of renowned research centres, including the New Zealand Centre for Environmental Law; the New Zealand Centre for Human Rights Law, Policy and Practice; and the New Zealand Centre for Law and Business. Our highly experienced team, many of whom are international leaders in their field, are available to supervise LLM or PhD dissertations or theses in their area of expertise. They also teach on the LLM, MLS and MTaxS programmes throughout the year.

Work and study facilities

We offer a number of facilities to support your postgraduate studies, including workspaces with dedicated desktop computers in the Law School and wireless network access for your laptops and devices. Whenever possible, PhD students are allocated offices in the Law School. The Davis Law Library provides computers for the exclusive use of postgraduate students and has rooms set aside for postgraduate study and discussion.

PhD students are welcome to attend the staff seminar series run throughout the year, with Auckland Law School staff and visiting academics presenting research papers and work in progress.

The Davis Law Library

The renowned Davis Law Library is one of 14 libraries in the University of Auckland Library system, and the largest law library in New Zealand. It boasts a collection of 190,000 printed volumes, 87,000 e-journals and 343,000 electronic books available to students. The focus of the collection is on the five principal Common Law jurisdictions (Australia, Canada, New Zealand, the United Kingdom and the United States of America), with materials from other jurisdictions also available.

Electronic services feature strongly in the Davis Law Library and access is provided to 800 bibliographic databases networked to members of the University both on and off campus, plus other specialist legal databases accessible only within the library system.

The Davis Law Library is open seven days a week during semester. Further information on opening hours, contact details and services are available at www.library.auckland.ac.nz/guides/law

A subject librarian service is available, and research consultations and assistance are provided by the library’s knowledgeable staff. Students enrolled at the University of Auckland have access to the following range of services:

- Print and audio-visual collections
- Major legal databases including LexisNexis, Westlaw.com, Brokers Online and HeinOnline
- Library web pages and electronic resources (in libraries, at other campus locations and off campus via the authorised log-in facilities)
- Borrowing facilities
- Information services
- Intercampus Library Delivery Service (ICLDS)
- Interlibrary loan and document delivery services
- Study and group discussion facilities
- Photocopying and computer printing facilities
- Training in current legal research methodologies

Davis Law Library staff offer an extensive range of year-round courses for students wishing to improve their electronic research skills. Group tutorials are provided for generic law databases, with individual tuition available for the more specialist databases. Cross-disciplinary database training is also available.

Bell Gully computer laboratory

The Bell Gully computer laboratory is a training facility within the Davis Law Library, comprising 15 computers, a data projector and audio-visual equipment. This facility ensures all law students are able to acquire the requisite skills for effective legal research. As a postgraduate student you are welcome to use the laboratory for research whenever it is not required for training.

“After obtaining my law degree and passing the bar exam in the Philippines, I decided to pursue higher education that would help me specialise in a particular field. I chose the Auckland Law School because I wanted to experience life in New Zealand. The Law School being one of the top in the world was also a factor.

“Studying how to make our planet more liveable and sustainable for future generations is one of the most relevant and fulfilling things I’ve done. It’s valuable to have a comparative view of how laws and policies are enacted and implemented in different parts of the world. This enriches my knowledge and helps me apply them to the legal framework of my country.

“It wasn’t difficult to settle into Auckland given the diverse range of people studying at the University of Auckland. I’ve really enjoyed immersing myself in a new culture, and the support I’ve received from Law staff has been outstanding.

“Studying for a Postgraduate Certificate in Law at the Auckland Law School was a great step towards my goal of helping to shape policies and laws that will benefit the environment.”

Maria Ara Garcia completed a Postgraduate Certificate in Law, specialising in Environmental Law and is studying towards a Master of Laws.
“I considered that part-time postgraduate study would be a great way to genuinely develop and advance the depth and breadth of my legal knowledge, and that it would provide a great platform and skill-set from which to address many of the complex and novel challenges I face in practice.”

“I knew the LLM would challenge me to look at law and address legal challenges in a fresh and innovative way – which I think is important, today more than ever, to the future success of lawyers in this dynamic world. As a New Zealand-admitted and practicing lawyer who first qualified overseas, I considered that because the Auckland Law School LLM degree is a highly regarded qualification, it would enhance my reputation with New Zealand firms.

“Auckland Law School has an outstanding reputation as a leading law school. Combined with its location, close to the heart of Auckland business and legal activity, and the range of courses available, it was the natural choice for further legal study for a practicing Auckland lawyer.

“The lecturers are incredibly knowledgeable and provide fantastic and engaging content. I like the intensive programmes as I am able to really immerse myself in a new field of study for a period and really focus on the content. I also like the alternative of being able to take a class after 5pm throughout the semester, so it can fit in seamlessly with a working day.

“My research focuses on a combination of corporate, commercial and regulatory law. I enjoy the deep insights as well as the key point overviews provided by faculty members and peers with incredible international and domestic experience. They have been instrumental in guiding me towards areas of novel and advanced thinking relevant to my own role, while being able to rely on a sound knowledge of the fundamentals of each area.

“Engaging in postgraduate study has helped me to think more dynamically and apply that mind set to my role. I have recently been named as the recipient of the Asia Pacific Counsel Awards, 2017 Competition Individual of the Year, for which I can certainly credit (at least in part) the knowledge, skills and mind set that have been developed while engaged in the LLM.”

Sasha Daniels is studying for a Master of Laws (Corporate and Commercial Law) part-time and is In-house Legal Counsel for Spark NZ.
What can you study?

Doctor of Philosophy (PhD)

The PhD is a thesis-only research degree programme, usually requiring full-time study for three to four years or part-time study for six to eight years. The degree is undertaken under supervision and candidates must complete a sustained course of advanced legal research resulting in the production of a substantial original thesis.

If you have New Zealand postgraduate qualifications, you will need to have completed an LLB(Hons), postgraduate bachelors (honours) degree in law or a Master of Laws with first class or second class (division 1) honours.

If you have overseas qualifications, you will need to have completed a masters-level qualification in a field related to your doctoral studies. You must have a GPE of at least 5.5.

You must be able to demonstrate an ability to carry out independent research and study in law.

Master of Laws (LLM)

The LLM can be undertaken by coursework, research or a combination of both. The programme is designed to provide an advanced level of study for both full-time students and those who are legal practitioners or engaged in other full or part-time employment. You can concentrate your study in particular areas of specialisation or study a broad range of legal subjects.

The LLM by research allows you to conduct in-depth study in an area of personal interest to enhance employment opportunities either professionally or academically.

The LLM by coursework allows you to study areas in greater depth and complexity than at undergraduate level. The programme offers courses that provide detailed analyses of particular areas of law as well as courses that are more policy oriented.

Each course contains a significant research component, usually in the form of a 12,500-word research essay. The LLM also permits cross-disciplinary study in the form of one or two masters courses (up to 30 points) from another faculty at the University of Auckland.

All of our postgraduate courses fulfil the New Zealand Law Society’s Continuing Professional Development (CPD) requirements.

Master of Legal Studies (MLS)

The MLS is for graduates who do not have an undergraduate law degree but whose work involves legal issues and dealing with legislation. The programme has a similar structure to the LLM and offers six specialisations: Corporate and Commercial Law; Environmental Law; Human Rights Law; International Law; Litigation and Dispute Resolution; and Public Law.

The MLS suits professionals from non-legal backgrounds who require some knowledge of legal matters, but do not necessarily want to practise law. Professionals who will particularly benefit include: accountants and auditors; architects and town planners; business development managers; compliance managers; engineers; IT professionals; police; and public sector staff. Completion of this degree will not satisfy the entry requirements for admission as a barrister and solicitor in New Zealand and is not a substitute for an LLB degree.

The MLS allows cross-disciplinary study of postgraduate courses from other University of Auckland faculties, enabling you to advance your professional skills while acquiring knowledge of the law.

Your programme must be approved by the Associate Dean (International and Postgraduate), and you may also be required to take LAW 131 (Legal Method) as part of a Certificate of Proficiency to gain admission to this programme.

Master of Taxation Studies (MTaxS)

The MTaxS is for graduates in either law or commerce who wish to develop their tax skills, or for practitioners wanting to update their tax knowledge. The MTaxS is suitable for graduates seeking careers in private legal practice specialising in tax law; tax accountants or consultants in commerce or industry; or those interested in a career with Inland Revenue. The programme offers courses on the New Zealand Income Tax Base; International Tax; Corporate Tax; GST; Property Taxation; Tax Disputes and Administration; and Tax Avoidance. Students enrolled in the MTaxS programme may take up to 3 points from the LLM schedule.

The MTaxS was ranked the 18th best specialist taxation masters in the world by EDUUNIVERSAL BEST MASTERS.
Law postgraduate pathways

*Direct entry into the PhD may be possible for candidates with an outstanding LLB(Hons) degree.

For the MTaxS you will require a three-year, non-law degree and relevant practical experience.

Postgraduate Certificate in Law (PGCertLaw)
The PGCertLaw is effectively half of an LLM or MLS degree. If you have limited time or wish to study only a few courses, this programme is ideal.

For some students, the PGCertLaw may also act as a pathway to the LLM or MLS degrees. You must achieve a GPA or GPE of 5.0 or higher in your PGCertLaw courses to transfer to the LLM or MLS degree – if you meet all other entry requirements.

Certificate of Proficiency (COP)
The COP is perfect for members of the legal profession, and others, who wish to further their legal education by enrolling in a single course.

COP courses (to a maximum of 30 points) can be credited towards an LLM or MLS degree. Students can also use the COP option to enrol into a single course that can be credited to an academic programme in another university.

Calculating your GPA/GPE

Grades or marks achieved at the University of Auckland are given a grade point average (GPA).

Grades or marks achieved at other institutions are given a grade point equivalent (GPE). Use our GPE calculator for an indication of your GPE: gpecalculator.auckland.ac.nz
Research programmes

If you are interested in including a research component in your programme, you should contact the Associate Dean (International and Postgraduate) in the first instance to discuss your thesis or dissertation topic.

PhD thesis

The PhD is an advanced degree awarded for an original contribution to research and academic debate in a student’s chosen legal specialisation, with the findings published in a substantial thesis.

Stimulating and rewarding, embarking on a PhD requires a high level of self-motivation and discipline, providing an exciting opportunity to engage in independent, cutting-edge research. Your PhD research will be guided by an appointed supervisor (usually a senior academic from the Auckland Law School) and co-supervisor. Your thesis can be completed within three to four years of full-time study or on a part-time basis.

Your PhD is an ideal qualification if you wish to pursue an academic or research career. For information about applying for doctoral studies, including tips on completing an Application for Admission (AFA), see: www.auckland.ac.nz/applying-for-a-doctorate

LLM by major thesis

The LLM degree by major thesis requires completion of a supervised 120-point research thesis of approximately 40,000 words on a topic approved by the Associate Dean (International and Postgraduate). In addition to completion of the 120-point thesis, you must complete LAW 788 Legal Research Methodology in the first semester of enrolment unless you are exempted from the course. Approval to undertake the degree by major thesis usually requires a GPA of 6.0 or higher in the LLB degree, or an LLB(Hons) degree. This is higher than the requirement for a taught LLM.

LLM, MLS or MTaxS by minor thesis

You can also complete a supervised 90-point thesis to be credited towards the LLM/MLS/MTaxS. As with the major thesis, the topic must be approved by the Associate Dean (International and Postgraduate). The final 30 points of your degree can be completed by enrolling in a taught course (either one 30-point course or two 15-point courses) or you could complete a 30-point dissertation.

In addition, LAW 788 Legal Research Methodology must be completed in the first semester of enrolment unless you are exempted from the course.

Dissertation

You may also include a supervised 30-point dissertation of approximately 15,000 words on a topic approved by the Associate Dean (International and Postgraduate) in lieu of one of your 30-point taught masters courses.

*Some students may be eligible for an exemption from LAW 788 Legal Research Methodology. Details of eligibility for an exemption will be provided in the course outline. Students eligible for an exemption must contact a student adviser at the Auckland Law School Student Centre to apply for the exemption to be recorded.

Note: The University requires all students admitted into a programme to complete the Academic Integrity Course in their first semester: www.auckland.ac.nz/academicintegritycourse
Taught programmes
If you wish to undertake your programme by taught courses we give you the flexibility to structure your studies to suit work and personal commitments. We offer a range of courses that are worth 15 or 30 points.

Intensive courses
These courses are held throughout the calendar year and are taught predominantly by visiting guest lecturers from New Zealand and overseas.
Our 30-point taught courses are held over five days, usually Wednesday to Friday and the following Monday and Tuesday to allow a break over the weekend. Our 15-point courses are held over three days from Wednesday to Friday.
Intensive courses run from 9am–4.30pm.

Full-semester courses
Our 30-point full-semester courses are held weekly over the 12-week semester and usually involve one three-hour seminar per week, from 5–8pm. These courses are usually taught by staff from the Auckland Law School and the Department of Commercial Law.

Half-semester courses
Our 30-point half-semester courses are held weekly over the first or second six weeks of semester and usually involve two three-hour seminars per week, from 5–8pm. Our 15-point half-semester courses are held over the first or second six weeks of semester and usually involve one three-hour seminar per week. These courses are generally taught by staff from the Auckland Law School and the Department of Commercial Law.

Flexible options
There are many options to choose from to make studying compatible with your busy life. For example, you can enrol in a mixture of intensive, full and half-semester courses in the same semester as long as there are no timetable clashes.

Perhaps you’d prefer to enrol in a combination of 30-point and 15-point courses to make up 120 points of the LLM/MLS/MTaxS programmes, which could include a dissertation or directed study. You can enrol in a combination of 15-point and 30-point courses to complete the 60 points required for the PGCertLaw.

You can complete up to 30 points at masters level in another faculty of the University of Auckland. Prior permission must be granted by the Associate Dean (Postgraduate) to have the course counted towards your law degree. Please note that the course fees may differ from those of your law courses.

Specialisations
The LLM, MLS, MTaxS and PGCertLaw courses for 2018 will be finalised later in 2017. For full details of the 2018 courses and a course timetable, visit:
www.law.auckland.ac.nz/pgcourses

Every year a number of invited teachers are added to the Auckland Law School’s group of teachers and researchers, which extends our range of subjects offered.

Corporate and Commercial Law
We have a large group of teachers and researchers in the area of Corporate and Commercial Law, covering subject areas such as Company Law; Intellectual Property; Shipping Law; Private International Law; Personal Property Security; Privacy Law; Taxation; and the traditional private law subjects (Contract, Tort, Equity and Restitution).

The range of courses includes International Commercial Contracts; Insolvency Law;
International and Comparative Copyright
Law; Corporate Governance; Law of Insurance Contracts; Competition Law and Policy; and Corporate Finance.

Environmental Law
Environmental Law has long been an area of strength in teaching and research for the Auckland Law School. Areas of study include Planning and Environmental Law; Resource Management; Mining and Energy Resources Law; and International Environmental Law. The range of courses has included Environmental Rights;
Climate Change Law; Mining, Energy and Natural Resources Law; and Global Environmental Law.

Human Rights Law
The Auckland Law School is proud to be a national leader in the field of Human Rights Law, both from a domestic perspective and internationally.

Recent courses have included Torture and Disappearances in International Human Rights Law; Comparative Human Rights Law;
Counterterrorism and Constitutionalism;
Comparative Indigenous Peoples and the Law;
and Human Rights Litigation.

International Law
International Law is an area of growing reach and importance. Recent courses taught in this field include International Trade Law; Law of the Sea and Antarctica; International Dispute Resolution; International Economic Regulation; International Peace and Security; and Selected Topics in International Law.

Litigation and Dispute Resolution Process-oriented teaching and research is a developing area of expertise for the Law School and we have recently added a Litigation and Dispute Resolution specialisation to our LLM. A number of our staff include the study of dispute resolution mechanisms in their teaching and research.

Recent courses have included International Arbitration; WTO Dispute Resolution; Cross Border Commercial Litigation; and Mediation.

Public Law
Public law research and teaching covers a wide range of areas at the Law School. We have a core group of public lawyers whose work covers both traditional constitutional and administrative law as well as more specialised work on the Bill of Rights and the Treaty of Waitangi. Recent courses include Local Government and Resource Management; Health and Mental Health Law; Immigration and Refugee Law; Constitutions and Customs in the South Pacific; Prosecuting in the 21st Century; Waitangi Tribunal; Past, Present and Future, and a number of courses found in the Human Rights Law specialisation above.

If you are interested in completing a course outside the Auckland Law School, contact a student adviser at the Law School Student Centre in the first instance.

Study in the heart of Auckland

Auckland is a diverse, inspirational city and our Law School is right in the heart of it. You’ll be studying in the hub of the business and legal district in a city that was ranked third of 231 world cities for quality of living in the Mercer Quality of Living Survey 2017.

While we offer the best that city life has to give, you’re never too far from the great outdoors. Our campuses and accommodation are close to cafés, restaurants, cinemas and parks, and within 30 minutes of some of the world’s most stunning beaches and pristine forests. A seaside city with a mild climate, known as the “City of Sails”, Auckland provides opportunities to pursue many sports and outdoor activities as well as explore the harbour and many islands of the Hauraki Gulf.

Auckland is also a thriving centre for arts, culture and entertainment. From major sporting highlights and cultural celebrations, to international fashion and stage shows, there’s something for everyone.

For more information about what’s on in Auckland, see: www.biglittlecity.co.nz, www.facebook.com/biglittlecity or www.aucklandcouncil.govt.nz under “news, events and culture”.

Life on campus

A place to call home

The University of Auckland has a variety of accommodation options that offer you an independent lifestyle, while still remaining in a university community during your postgraduate studies.

Our self-catered flats and apartments are comfortably furnished with your water, power, internet, and membership to the University Recreation Center included in the residential fees. If living on campus doesn’t appeal, our Accommodation Solutions team can help you find accommodation more to your liking – whether you are after a single room, or a more family-friendly environment. More information about our wide range of accommodation options at the University of Auckland can be found at: www.accommodation.auckland.ac.nz or email accom@auckland.ac.nz

Employment during study

Advanced postgraduate students are sometimes employed as paid tutors or teaching assistants for undergraduate courses. Tutoring is a great way to gain valuable professional and teaching experience during your masters or PhD study.

Other opportunities include part-time research assistantships, administrative duties or library work. There may be limits on allowable work hours (particularly for scholarship or international students), so you need to check any conditions that may apply. If you are working outside of the University to finance your study, it is important that you discuss your work commitments with a student adviser or your supervisor to ensure you can balance your workload realistically.

Jessie Bo Wu moved from China to New Zealand to study for her PhD at the Auckland Law School.

“In the beginning the reason I chose the Auckland Law School was because of its good reputation and high QS Ranking (36th in the world by subject). Now that I’m here I really like the good study environment and great people. It’s a supportive and friendly environment and the professors and librarians are always happy to provide resources to support your research. The professional staff have arranged a good study environment with a materials room, postgraduate research rooms, amenities and my own office. The other PhD students are also very friendly and we share study experiences.

“Once I’ve completed my PhD it will help me do further study in my home country of China. China has some serious environmental problems, but it will also play a very important role in reducing GHG emissions at an international level through renewable energy uptake and improve energy efficiency. I’m hoping my research will one day make a real difference to society – and that motivates me.”

Jessie Bo Wu is studying for her PhD in Environmental Law, specialising in renewable energy, and energy efficiency law and policy.
“When I was studying for my Bachelor of Commerce degree at the Business School, I did one introductory Law paper, which I really enjoyed. Later on I became a business manager and I noticed that laws and regulations had a great impact on my commercial decision-making. I regularly worked alongside, and was advised by, lawyers so I thought having some knowledge of the law would make my interaction with lawyers a lot more efficient – and cost effective! ”

“The Master of Legal Studies was the perfect solution. It not only provides a solid legal understanding, but also helps to polish my skills in analysing high-level strategies. It offered me the exposure and opportunity to think about many conceptual scholarly issues, such as how international conventions help to resolve cross-border commercial disputes, or how corporate governance laws are designed to best allocate corporate power to various parties.

“I’ve been really impressed by how many world-leading lecturers are involved in the MLS programme, both from New Zealand and overseas. I have learnt from top experts in international law—such as Sir David Williams QC and Amokura Kawharu from New Zealand, and some of the world’s leading corporate law scholars—such as Marc Moore from Cambridge University.

“The programme also trained me on ‘intensive learning’ and time management. Without a legal background it can be challenging at first to produce a 12,000-word masters-level essay after just five days of intensive training and two months of research. But once I made it through, I became very confident picking up anything in a very short timeframe.

“I have most enjoyed the dynamic background of students. From recent graduates from emerging market jurisdictions, to industry practitioners with years of experience in the field we study, everyone in my class is smart and has an interesting background. I’ve learnt a lot simply by studying alongside them.”

Tony Zheng is studying for a Master of Legal Studies.
Application process

If you have not previously enrolled at the University of Auckland you will need to apply for admission online. You can do this using the online application form: www.apply.auckland.ac.nz

You will receive an acknowledgement email listing the supporting documents we require, and a Student ID number for logging on to your Application for Admission. You can check your application status online and see what supporting documents you will need to provide.

Your application will be assessed once we receive sufficient information (such as uploaded transcripts, other academic results, references or a portfolio) or you have attended an interview.

We will assess your application and inform you of the outcome via email. The status will show on the ‘Your applications’ section of the Application for Admission.

If you are returning to the University of Auckland and:

• You were enrolled in the semester prior to beginning your postgraduate programme, you can make an Add/Change Programme in your online Application for Admission.

• A supplementary application may also be required.

Applications for the LLM, MLS, PGCertLaw and MTaxS are accepted throughout the year.

International student applications

We welcome applications from international students and we recommend you start the application process as early as possible so you have sufficient time to apply for your visa. The University has a number of official agents and representatives overseas who can assist you with the application process in person. To find a list of people who can help, visit www.auckland.ac.nz/overseasrep and click on “How to apply”.

English language requirements

A high level of English language proficiency is needed to successfully study postgraduate law at the University of Auckland.

All international students are required to provide evidence of their English language competency. For some students, evidence of previous tertiary study in English will be sufficient.

The required standards for entry to postgraduate study in law are:

• IELTS (Academic): Overall score of 7.0 and all bands 6.5 or better
• Internet-based TOEFL (iBT): Overall score of 100 plus a written score of 24
• Paper-based TOEFL: Overall score of 600 plus Essay (TWE) of 5.0
• CAE and CPE: Overall score of 185 and all bands 176 or better
• PTE Academic: Overall score of 65 and no PTE communicative skills score below 58
• MELAB 90
• Vitnemal English level 4 pass for Norwegian students (subject to DELNA assessment)
Fees
Fees for 2018 will be set towards the end of 2017. As a general indication, the 2017 annual tuition fees for a Law postgraduate programme were approximately $4,132–$9,714 (the MTaxS was $17,543) for domestic students and approximately $31,510 for international students. These amounts are based on a standard full-time enrolment.

The 2017 annual tuition fees for a PhD were $6,832. New international PhD students will be accorded domestic status for the purposes of tuition fees, subject to supervisory and residency requirements.

For information on fees for international students for all of our postgraduate programmes, including the domestic status for international PhD students visit: www.international.auckland.ac.nz

If you are not enrolled full-time you will pay proportionately lower fees. All students also pay a student services fee. As an indication, the 2017 fee was $765.60 for students undertaking a full-time load of 120 points. Students taking fewer than 120 points pay proportionately lower fees.

For more information on fees and money matters visit: www.auckland.ac.nz/fees

Student loans
Student loans may be available to students who are New Zealand citizens and permanent residents to support their costs.

You may apply for a loan to cover tuition fees, course-related costs (i.e., books, stationery and travel) and living costs. Contact StudyLink on 0800 88 99 00 or for more information visit: www.studylink.govt.nz

Doctoral Funding – PReSS accounts
If you are a doctoral student undertaking supervised research, you are automatically entitled to research support funding through a University PReSS (Postgraduate Research Student Support) account for up to four years. You can use the money for expenses such as attending conferences, research-related travel and accommodation, and research consumables.
