Welcome from the Dean

Auckland Law School offers the largest range of postgraduate law programmes in New Zealand and is ranked among the best law schools in the world*.

We also offer the Master of Taxation Studies for law or commerce graduates who intend to make tax consulting or tax advocacy their career.

The Davis Law Library is an outstanding international research facility. Its collection of online and print resources is unequalled within New Zealand. You can access its many databases wherever and whenever you want to research. The depth and breadth of the collection provides an excellent foundation for your study.

For our LLM, MLS and MTaxS candidates, there are postgraduate scholarships on offer annually.

We encourage you to join us in the postgraduate programme. You will find it challenging and rewarding. For those proposing to come from overseas, Auckland is a great place to live, study and make life-long friends.

The rest of New Zealand is an added attraction for you to explore during breaks in your programme.

We look forward to welcoming you to postgraduate study at Auckland Law School.

PROFESSOR PENEOPE MATHEW
Dean of Law

Why study with us?

Auckland Law School leads the development of quality postgraduate legal education in New Zealand. Our postgraduate degrees are internationally recognised, with graduates who are valued and sought after throughout New Zealand and the world.

Postgraduate study in Law
The Auckland Law School offers a wide range of courses taught by our own experts, as well as eminent scholars from the world’s premier law schools. We offer six specialisations: Corporate and Commercial Law; Environmental Law; Human Rights Law; International Law; Litigation and Dispute Resolution; and Public Law.

These specialisations enable you to focus on a particular area of study, while allowing you the opportunity to pursue other areas of interest.

Postgraduate programmes offered by the Law School include the Doctor of Philosophy (PhD), Master of Laws (LLM), Master of Legal Studies (MLS), Master of Taxation Studies (MTaxS) and a Postgraduate Certificate in Law (PGCertLaw).

Study programmes are designed with great flexibility to cater to a diverse range of people, from legal practitioners to full-time students. The Law School offers a number of courses (intensive, part-semester and whole-semester) that are globally relevant to both domestic and international students.

If you want to study for an internationally recognised degree in a stimulating academic environment with a strong international focus, explore our study options and get your career off to the best possible start.

The benefits of advanced legal study
Postgraduate study in law is increasingly important in a globalised world, as careers now demand more focused, sophisticated and advanced legal expertise. The Law School’s postgraduate programmes allow you to specialise in areas that are important to employers, but also suit your academic interests. The programmes attract a diverse mix of new graduates, experienced practitioners, partners and industry professionals, as well as international students from various jurisdictions, all of whom bring their differing perspectives and talents to the postgraduate seminars.

Investing in postgraduate study at the University of Auckland will broaden your academic, research and employment horizons, while adding value with specialist skills and knowledge.

Whether you plan to join the next generation of leading lawyers in New Zealand or strive to become a leader internationally, a postgraduate law qualification from the Auckland Law School will help you to stand out among your peers on the competitive international stage.

Auckland Law School ranked 44th in the world
The University of Auckland is New Zealand’s highest-ranked university.

The Auckland Law School is ranked 44th in the QS World University Rankings by Subject 2019. The University as a whole is also ranked among the world’s top 250 universities by the Times Higher Education World Rankings of Universities, and is the highest ranked university in New Zealand for Graduate Employability.

The University of Auckland has a strong international focus. It is the only New Zealand member of Universitas 21 and is a member of the Worldwide Universities Network and the Association of Pacific Rim Universities. The University of Auckland is home to more than 42,000 students. More than 7,000 international students from over 120 countries choose to study here.
Flexible learning

Our postgraduate programmes are structured to allow you maximum flexibility. We understand that personal, family and work commitments are important factors when deciding whether to study, so we offer options that fit with your lifestyle. There are four options to choose from: full-semester courses taught in the early evening; half-semester courses; intensively-taught courses over three to five days; and independent research programmes. We encourage you to meet with one of our advisers to discuss your best fit.

Specialisation

Specialisation is optional, but you can elect to have your LLM or MLS degree awarded in Corporate and Commercial Law; Environmental Law; Human Rights Law; International Law; Litigation and Dispute Resolution; or Public Law. To specialise you must complete a minimum of three-quarters of your degree points in one of these areas.

Research centres

The Auckland Law School is home to a number of renowned research centres, including the Aotearoa New Zealand Centre for Indigenous Peoples and the Law; New Zealand Centre for Environmental Law; the New Zealand Centre for Human Rights Law, Policy and Practice; New Zealand Centre for ICT Law; New Zealand Centre for Legal Theory; and the New Zealand Centre for Law and Business. Our highly experienced team, many of whom are international leaders in their field, are available to supervise LLM or PhD dissertations or theses in their area of expertise. They also teach on the LLM, MLS and MTaxS programmes throughout the year.

Work and study facilities

We offer a number of facilities to support your postgraduate studies, including workspaces with dedicated computers in the Law School and wireless network access for your laptops and devices. Whenever possible, PhD students are allocated offices in the Law School.

The Davis Law Library

The renowned Davis Law Library is 1 of 14 University of Auckland libraries, and the largest law library in New Zealand. It boastson collection of 130,000 printed volumes, 87,000 e-journals and 343,000 electronic books available to students. The focus of the collection is on the five principal Common Law jurisdictions (Australia, Canada, New Zealand, the United Kingdom and the United States of America), with materials from other jurisdictions also available.

Electronic services feature strongly in the Davis Law Library and access is provided to 800 bibliographic databases networked to members of the University both on and off campus, plus other specialist legal databases accessible only within the library system.

The Davis Law Library is open seven days a week during semester. Further information on opening hours, contact details and services are available at www.library.auckland.ac.nz/guides/law

A subject librarian service is available, and research consultations and assistance are provided by the library’s knowledgeable staff. Students enrolled at the University of Auckland have access to the following range of services:
- Print and audio-visual collections
- Major legal databases including LexisNexis, Westlaw.com, Brokers Online and HeinOnline
- Training in current legal research methodologies
- Library web pages and electronic resources (in libraries, at other campus locations and off campus via the authorised log-in facilities)
- Borrowing facilities
- Information services
- Intercampus Library Delivery Service (ICLDS)
- Interlibrary loan and document delivery services
- Study and group discussion facilities
- Photocopying and computer printing facilities

Davis Law Library staff offer an extensive range of year-round courses for students wishing to improve their electronic research skills. Group tutorials are provided for generic law databases, with individual tuition available for the more specialist databases. Cross-disciplinary database training is also available.

“I like the fact that you are given a lot of freedom to do your research and for the writing process, while at the same time the academic staff are friendly and always available for guidance and talks.”

“I had heard positive things about Auckland Law School from other Norwegian students who previously studied here. Auckland seemed like the perfect place in New Zealand to enjoy vibrant city life, and at the same time, have access to amazing beaches and nature close by. It’s a short drive to Piha, Raglan and other good surf spots. Coming from freezing cold Norwegian winters, the climate and mild temperature is also appreciated.

“Commercial and corporate law is a broad field of law that encompasses many thought-provoking questions. Last semester I took a fascinating course in intellectual property, led by Rob Batty, who provided interesting insight into New Zealand’s IP laws. Through my research essay I was also given the opportunity to dig down into an area of interest. As an international student you may also write a comparative analysis - this furthered my knowledge of Norwegian laws.”

Bendik Pedersen is studying towards a Master of Laws in Commercial and Corporate Law.
“The process of completing a PhD is to develop into an independent researcher. My studies allow me to establish routines and skills which will help on my career path in the future.”

“I changed my area of interest from financial law to international law and became interested in the intersection between the two. Therefore, I chose to pursue a PhD study as I felt I needed to gain more knowledge in the field. Moreover, given that I saw myself taking the academic path, I saw a PhD as a necessary step.

“I have immersed myself into the various aspects of life in the University. I’ve had opportunities to tutor, mark papers and supervise exams. I have also been involved in activities organised by the Postgraduate Students’ Association (PGSA), including hikes, trips, writing retreats, yoga sessions and many more. I have developed connections with my PhD colleagues from other faculties. I am learning a lot about academia and academic life as well as understanding my place here by participating in the Doctoral Academic Leadership Initiative.

“The infrastructure created for doctoral students at the Law School assisted me in working without worrying too much about logistics. The Davis Law Library, the facility team and the IT team all provide great support to students for their research process. You just need to show up, ‘nail your feet to the floor’ and put the thinking into your work.

“I found that settling in Auckland was easy given the simple and minimum bureaucracy. Everything has a guide or a manual which can be easily understood and accessed online. In addition, people here are nice, helpful and trustworthy, which makes the process quite pleasant.”

Elena Pesina is from Russia and lived in Tel Aviv, Israel for three years before moving to New Zealand. She is in her second year of study for a PhD in Law and is a recipient of the University of Auckland Doctoral Scholarship.
What can you study?

Doctor of Philosophy (PhD)
The PhD is a thesis-only research degree programme, usually requiring full-time study for three to four years or part-time study for six to eight years. The degree is undertaken under supervision and candidates must complete a sustained course of advanced legal research resulting in the production of a substantial original thesis.

If you have New Zealand postgraduate qualifications, you will need to have completed an LLB(Hons), a postgraduate bachelors (honours) degree in law or a Master of Laws with first class or second class (division 1) honours.

If you have international qualifications, you will need to have completed a masters-level qualification in a field related to your doctoral studies. You must have a GPE of at least 5.5. You must be able to demonstrate an ability to carry out independent research and study in law.

Master of Laws (LLM)
The LLM can be undertaken full or part-time by coursework, research or a combination of both. The programme is designed to provide an advanced level of study for both full-time students and those who are legal practitioners or engaged in other full or part-time employment. The LLM is a one-year programme full-time. Students must complete 120 points.

You can concentrate your study in particular areas of specialisation or study a broad range of legal subjects.

The LLM by research allows you to conduct in-depth study in an area of personal interest to enhance employment opportunities either professionally or academically.

The LLM by coursework allows you to study areas in greater depth and complexity than at undergraduate level. The programme offers courses that provide detailed analyses of particular areas of law as well as courses that are more policy oriented.

Each course contains a significant research component, usually in the form of a 12,500-word research essay. The LLM also permits cross-disciplinary study in the form of one or two masters courses (up to 30 points) from another faculty at the University of Auckland.

Master of Legal Studies (MLS)
The MLS is for graduates who do not have an undergraduate law degree but whose work involves legal issues and dealing with legislation. The programme has a similar structure to the LLM and offers six specialisations: Corporate and Commercial Law; Environmental Law; Human Rights Law; International Law; Litigation and Dispute Resolution; and Public Law. The MLS may be either a one-year (120 points) or a one and a half-year (180 points) programme full-time, depending on a student’s entry qualification.

The MLS suits professionals from non-legal backgrounds who require some knowledge of legal matters, but do not necessarily want to practise law. Professionals who will particularly benefit include: accountants and auditors; architects and town planners; business development managers; compliance managers; engineers; IT professionals; police; and public sector staff. Completion of this degree will not satisfy the entry requirements for admission as a barrister and solicitor in New Zealand and is not a substitute for an LLB degree.

The MLS allows cross-disciplinary study of postgraduate courses from other University of Auckland faculties, enabling you to advance your professional skills while acquiring knowledge of the law.

Your programme must be approved by the Associate Dean (International and Postgraduate).

Master of Taxation Studies (MTaxS)
The MTaxS* is for graduates in either law or commerce who wish to develop their tax skills, or for practitioners wanting to update their tax knowledge. The MTaxS may be either a one-year (120 points) or a one and a half-year (180 points) programme full-time, depending on a student’s entry qualification. The MTaxS is suitable for graduates seeking careers in private legal practice specialising in tax law; tax accountants or consultants in commerce or industry; or those interested in a career with Inland Revenue. The programme offers courses on the New Zealand Income Tax Base; International Tax; Corporate Tax; GST; Property Taxation; Tax Disputes and Administration; and Tax Avoidance. Students enrolled in the MTaxS programme may take up to 30 points from the LLM schedule.

All of our postgraduate courses fulfil the New Zealand Law Society’s Continuing Professional Development (CPD) requirements.

*The MTaxS was ranked the 16th best specialist taxation masters in the world by EDUNIVERSAL BEST MASTERS.
Postgraduate Certificate in Law (PGCertLaw)

The PGCertLaw is effectively half of an LLM or MLS degree. If you have limited time or wish to study only a few courses, this programme is ideal.

For some students, the PGCertLaw may also act as a pathway to the LLM or MLS degree. You must achieve a GPA or GPE of 5.0 or higher in your PGCertLaw courses to transfer to the LLM or MLS degree – if you meet all other entry requirements.

Certificate of Proficiency (COP)

The COP is perfect for members of the legal profession, and others, who wish to further their legal education by enrolling in a single course. COP courses (to a maximum of 30 points) can be credited towards an LLM or MLS degree. Students can also use the COP option to enrol into a single course that can be credited to an academic programme at another university.

Calculating your GPA/GPE

Grades or marks achieved at the University of Auckland are given a grade point average (GPA).

Grades or marks achieved at other institutions are given a grade point equivalent (GPE). Use our GPE calculator for an indication of your GPE:

*Programme Compulsory course Taught course Research Programme duration

*Some students may be eligible for an exemption from LAW 700 Legal Research Methodology. Details of eligibility for an exemption will be provided in the course outline. Students eligible for an exemption must contact a student adviser at the Auckland Law School Student Centre to apply for the exemption to be recorded.

 Requirement can be waived.

Research programmes

If you are interested in including a research component in your programme, you should contact a potential supervisor in the first instance to discuss your thesis or dissertation topic. The thesis or dissertation topic will need to be approved by the Associate Dean (International and Postgraduate).

PhD thesis

The PhD is an advanced degree awarded for an original contribution to research and academic debate in a student’s chosen legal specialisation, with the findings published in a substantial thesis.

Stimulating and rewarding, embarking on a PhD requires a high level of self-motivation and discipline, providing an exciting opportunity to engage in independent, cutting-edge research. Your PhD research will be guided by an appointed supervisor (usually a senior academic from the Auckland Law School) and co-supervisor. Your thesis can be completed within three to four years of full-time study or on a part-time basis.

Your PhD is an ideal qualification if you wish to pursue an academic or research career. For information about applying for doctoral studies, including tips on completing an Application for Admission (AFA), see: www.auckland.ac.nz/applying-for-a-doctorate

LLM by major thesis

The LLM degree by major thesis requires completion of a supervised 120-point research thesis of approximately 40,000 words on a topic approved by the Associate Dean (International and Postgraduate). In addition to completion of the 120-point thesis, you must complete LAW 700 Legal Research Methodology in the first semester of enrolment unless you are exempted from the course. Approval to undertake the degree by major thesis usually requires a GPA of 6.0 or higher in the LLB degree, or an LLB(Hons) degree. This is higher than the requirement for a taught LLM.

LLM, MLS or MTaxS by minor thesis

You can also complete a supervised 90-point thesis to be credited towards the LLM/MLS/MTaxS. As with the major thesis, the topic must be approved by the Associate Dean (International and Postgraduate). The remaining points of your degree can be completed by enrolling in taught courses (which are either 30-points or 15-points) and/or completing a dissertation.

In addition, LAW 700 Legal Research Methodology must be completed in the first semester of enrolment unless you are exempted from the course.

Dissertation

You may also include a supervised 30-point dissertation of approximately 15,000 words on a topic approved by the Associate Dean (International and Postgraduate) in lieu of one of your 30-point taught masters courses.

Taught programmes

If you wish to undertake your programme by taught courses we give you the flexibility to structure your studies to suit work and personal commitments. We offer a range of courses that are worth 15 or 30 points.

Intensive courses

These courses are held throughout the calendar year and are taught predominantly by visiting guest lecturers from New Zealand and overseas. Our 30-point taught courses are generally held over five days, usually Wednesday to Friday and the following Monday and Tuesday to allow a break over the weekend. Our 15-point courses are generally held over three days from Wednesday to Friday. Intensive courses run from 9am–4.30pm.

Full-semester courses

Our 30-point full-semester courses are held weekly over the 12-week semester and usually involve one three-hour seminar per week, from 5–8pm. These courses are usually taught by staff from the Auckland Law School and the Department of Commercial Law.

Half-semester courses

Our 30-point half-semester courses are held weekly over the first or second six weeks of semester and usually involve two three-hour seminars per week, from 5–8pm. Our 15-point half-semester courses are held over the first or second six weeks of semester and usually involve one three-hour seminar per week. These courses are generally taught by staff from the Auckland Law School and the Department of Commercial Law.

Flexible options

There are many options to choose from to make studying compatible with your busy life. For example, you can enrol in a mixture of intensive, full and half-semester courses in the same semester as long as there are no timetable clashes.

Perhaps you’d prefer to enrol in a combination of 30-point and 15-point courses to make up 120 points of the LLM/MLS/MTaxS programmes, which could include a dissertation or directed study. You can enrol in a combination of 15-point and 30-point courses to complete the 60 points required for the PGCertLaw.

You can complete up to 30 points at masters level in another faculty of the University of Auckland. Prior permission must be granted by the Associate Dean (Postgraduate) to have the course counted towards your law degree. Please note that the course fees may differ from those of your law courses.

Specialisations

The LLM, MLS, MTaxS and PGCertLaw courses for 2020 will be finalised later in 2019. For full details of the 2020 courses and a course timetable, visit: www.law.auckland.ac.nz/pgcourses

Every year a number of invited teachers are added to the Auckland Law School’s group of teachers and researchers, which extends our range of subjects offered.

Corporate and Commercial Law

We have a large group of teachers and researchers in the area of Corporate and Commercial Law, covering subject areas such as Company Law; Intellectual Property, Shipping Law; Private International Law; Personal Property Security; Privacy Law; Taxation, and the traditional private law subjects (Contract, Tort, Equity and Restitution).

The range of courses includes International Commercial Contracts; Insolvency Law; International and Comparative Copyright Law; Corporate Governance; Law of Insurance Contracts; Competition Law and Policy; and Corporate Finance.

Environmental Law

Environmental Law has long been an area of strength in teaching and research for the Auckland Law School. Areas of study include Planning and Environmental Law; Resource Management; Mining and Energy Resources Law; and International Environmental Law. The range of courses has included Environmental Rights; Climate Change Law; Mining, Energy and Natural Resources Law; and Global Environmental Law.

Human Rights Law

The Auckland Law School is proud to be a national leader in the field of Human Rights Law, both from a domestic perspective and internationally.

Recent courses have included Torture and Disappearances in International Human Rights Law, Comparative Human Rights Law, Counterterrorism and Constitutionalism; Comparative Indigenous Peoples and the Law; and Human Rights Litigation.

International Law

International Law is an area of growing reach and importance. Recent courses taught in this field include International Trade Law, Law of the Sea and Antarctica; International Dispute Resolution; International Economic Regulation; International Peace and Security; and Selected Topics in International Law.

Litigation and Dispute Resolution

Process-oriented teaching and research is a developing area of expertise for the Law School and we have recently added a Litigation and Dispute Resolution specialisation to our LLM. A number of our staff include the study of dispute resolution mechanisms in their teaching and research.

Recent courses have included International Arbitration; WTO Dispute Resolution; Cross Border Commercial Litigation; and Mediation.

Public Law

Public law research and teaching covers a wide range of areas at the Law School. We have a core group of public lawyers whose work covers both traditional constitutional and administrative law as well as more specialised work on the Bill of Rights and the Treaty of Waitangi. Recent courses include Local Government and Resource Management; Health and Mental Health Law; Immigration and Refugee Law; Constitutions and Customs in the South Pacific; Prosecuting in the 21st Century; Waitangi Tribunal: Past, Present and Future; and a number of courses found in the Human Rights Law specialisation above.

If you are interested in completing a course outside the Auckland Law School, contact a student adviser at the Law School Student Centre in the first instance.

Life on campus

Study in the heart of Auckland

Auckland is a diverse, inspirational city and our Law School is right in the heart of it. You’ll be studying in the hub of the business and legal district in a city that was ranked third of 231 cities for quality of living in the Mercer Quality of Living Survey 2019.

While we offer the best that city life has to give, you’re never too far from the great outdoors. Our campuses and accommodation are close to cafés, restaurants, cinemas and parks, and within 30 minutes of some of the world’s most stunning beaches and pristine forests. A seaside city with a mild climate, known as the “City of Sails”, Auckland provides opportunities to pursue many sports and outdoor activities as well as explore the harbour and many islands of the Hauraki Gulf.

Auckland is also a thriving centre for arts, culture and entertainment. From major sporting highlights and cultural celebrations, to international fashion and stage shows, there’s something for everyone.

For more information about what’s on in Auckland, see: www.heartofthecity.co.nz, www.facebook.com/heartofaklcity or www.aucklandcouncil.govt.nz under Events.

A place to call home

The University of Auckland has a variety of accommodation options that offer you an independent lifestyle, while still remaining in a university community during your postgraduate studies.

Our self-catered flats and apartments are comfortably furnished with your water, power, internet, and membership to the University Recreation Centre included in the residential fees. If living on campus doesn’t appeal, our Accommodation Solutions team can help you find accommodation more to your liking. More information about our wide range of accommodation options at the University of Auckland can be found at: www.accommodation.auckland.ac.nz or email accom@auckland.ac.nz

Employment during study

Advanced postgraduate students are sometimes employed as paid tutors or teaching assistants for undergraduate courses. Tutoring is a great way to gain valuable professional and teaching experience during your masters or PhD study.

Other opportunities include part-time research assistantships, administrative duties or library work. There may be limits on allowable work hours (particularly for scholarship or international students), so you need to check any conditions that may apply. If you are working outside of the University to finance your study, it is important that you discuss your work commitments with a student adviser or your supervisor to ensure you can balance your workload realistically.

“I chose to study at the University of Auckland because it is a recognised institute, known by its good reputation amongst students all over the world. I hope my qualification will allow me to find a career in the public sector, enabling me to serve my community.”

“I decided to pursue postgraduate study because I am passionate about human rights and wanted to become a specialist in the field.

“The lecturers at the University have really enhanced my studies. They are very approachable and allow students to express their own views. They are respectful of the diverse opinions presented and encourage the students to engage in class discussions.

“I have enjoyed meeting other students at the various social events, like movie nights, planned by the Faculty. These provide a good chance to get together with other students and to relax after studying.”

Chethani Serasundera is studying for a Master of Laws specialising in Human Rights Law.
“My postgraduate studies have provided me with a wider base of knowledge, broadened my mind and increased my confidence in the workplace.”

“While working at Inland Revenue, the University of Auckland was highly recommended to me by my manager who encouraged me to study law. I completed my Master of Laws at the University of Auckland and have chosen to return to study for a Master of Taxation Studies.

“Taxation plays an important role and has an impact on our daily lives including housing, day-to-day expenses and business decisions. I enjoy the papers as the topics are very practical and discuss issues that are current.

“I am originally from Fiji and have a great interest in indigenous peoples’ affairs. By developing my knowledge of international tax, my aim is to assist and contribute towards the well-being and success of indigenous peoples, especially in the Pacific.

“I have found the University a great place to study, with wonderful lecturers and resources that assist students to excel in their learning. It was Dr Nin Tomas, one of my lecturers, who sparked my interest in indigenous law to a much higher level.

“The intensive yet flexible courses at the University allow me to study and still continue to work full time. The resources available allow me to do my research without having to compromise my work and keep a balance between work, study and life.”

Asilika Wise is a Master of Laws graduate, currently studying for a Master of Taxation Studies.
Apply now and join us

We’re pleased you are interested in studying with us and look forward to welcoming you as a postgraduate student. As a first step, we recommend you contact a student adviser at the Auckland Law School Student Centre to discuss your proposed programme of study prior to making a formal application to the University of Auckland. This will help you ascertain whether your previous study qualifies you for entry and familiarise you with the specific requirements and regulations for that programme.

Application process

If you have not previously enrolled at the University of Auckland you will need to apply for admission online. You can do this using the online application form: www.apply.auckland.ac.nz

You will receive an acknowledgement email listing the supporting documents we require, and a Student ID number for logging on to your Application for Admission. You can check your application status online and see what supporting documents you will need to provide.

Your application will be assessed once we receive sufficient information (such as uploaded transcripts, other academic results, references or a portfolio) or you have attended an interview.

We will assess your application and inform you of the outcome via email. The status will show on the ‘Your applications’ section of the Application for Admission.

If you are returning to the University of Auckland and:

- You were enrolled in the semester prior to beginning your postgraduate programme, you can make an Add/Change Programme in your online Application for Admission.
- A supplementary application may also be required.

Applications for the LLM, MLS, PGCertLaw and MTaxS are accepted throughout the year.

International student applications

We welcome applications from international students and we recommend you start the application process as early as possible so you have sufficient time to apply for your visa. The University has a number of official agents and representatives overseas who can assist you with the application process in person.

Fees for 2020 will be set towards the end of 2019. As a general indication, the 2019 annual tuition fees for a Law postgraduate programme were approximately $8,596 - $10,107 for a 120-point LLM or MLS for domestic students and $35,712 for international students. The 120-point MTaxS was $10,106 - $18,251 for domestic students and $33,688 - $35,372 for international students. These amounts are based on a standard full-time enrolment. The 2019 annual tuition fees for a PhD were $7,109. New international PhD students will be accorded domestic status for the purposes of tuition fees, subject to supervisory and residency requirements.

For information on fees for international students for all of our postgraduate programmes, including the domestic status for international PhD students visit: www.international.auckland.ac.nz/fees

If you are not enrolled full-time you will pay proportionately lower fees.

All students also pay a student services fee. As an indication, the 2019 fee was $847.20 for students undertaking a full-time load of 120 points. Students taking fewer than 120 points pay proportionately lower fees.

For more information on fees and money matters visit: www.auckland.ac.nz/fees

Student loans

Student loans may be available to students who are New Zealand citizens and permanent residents to support their costs. You may apply for a loan to cover tuition fees, course-related costs (ie, books, stationery and travel) and living costs. Contact StudyLink on 0800 88 99 00 or for more information visit: wwwstudylink.govt.nz

Doctoral Funding – PReSS accounts

If you are a doctoral student undertaking supervised research, you are automatically entitled to research support funding through a University PReSS (Postgraduate Research Student Support) account for up to four years. You can use the money for expenses such as attending conferences, research-related travel and accommodation, and research consumables.

All applicants for Law’s doctoral programme will also be considered for the University of Auckland Doctoral Scholarship, providing $27,600, plus fees per year for three years.

Information for international students

The Education (Pastoral Care of International Students) Code of Practice

The University of Auckland has agreed to observe and be bound by the Education (Pastoral Care of International Students) Code of Practice.

www.nzqa.govt.nz/the-code

Immigration

To complete enrolment international students must have a current student visa. Full details of visa requirements, advice on rights to employment in New Zealand while studying, and reporting requirements are available through the New Zealand Immigration Service, and can be viewed on their website at: www.immigration.govt.nz/study

Eligibility for health services

Most international students are not entitled to publicly funded health services while in New Zealand. If you receive medical treatment during your visit, you may be liable for the full cost of that treatment. Details on entitlements to publicly funded health services are available through the Ministry of Health and can be viewed on its website: www.health.govt.nz

Medical and travel insurance

All international students are legally required to have appropriate medical and travel insurance, and your enrolment will not be completed until you have provided proof of suitable coverage. The University of Auckland offers a scheme that meets these requirements and can assist you with any questions or concerns you may have. Details will be provided with your offer of admission into the University. For more information visit: www.auckland.ac.nz/is-insurance

Costs

All costs are shown in New Zealand dollars and are expressed inclusive of New Zealand Goods and Services Tax if applicable.

Privacy

The University of Auckland undertakes to collect, store, use and disclose your information in accordance with the provisions of the Privacy Act 1993. Further details of how the University handles your information are set out in a brochure available from the ClockTower Call Centre or by phoning 0800 61 62 63.
