

EUROPE INSTITUTE FLASH FORUM

Terror in Europe

Understanding Global Violence

Nice, July 2016; Brussels, March 2016; Paris, November & January 2015; ...and earlier: London, July 2005, Madrid, March 2004... The list of terrorist attacks on European soil could go on and on, but their frequency and violence have increased, and the pain and despair of their victims with them. The reasons seem obvious: war in the Middle East, the involvement of Western powers in the local chaos, the rise of ISIS, the massive presence of Muslim immigration in European countries, lone wolf terrorism... But this panel will invite you to go beyond these conventional answers and try to understand the roots of the globalisation of terrorist violence. Which, of course, begs the question: could any of this happen in New Zealand?

Friday 22 JULY 2016
Case Room 1 (260-005) 4-5:30pm
Owen G Glenn Building
University of Auckland

Panel discussion with: Jean-Jacques Courtine (European Studies), Tom Gregory (Politics), Nicolas Pirsoul (Politics), Bridgette Sullivan-Taylor (Management), Chris Wilson (Politics), chaired by Mark Amsler (Comparative Literature, Director of the Europe Institute).